WE'RE STILL HERE: RESPECTFULLY ENGAGING WITH THE NATIVE AMERICAN COMMUNITY

A NOTE FROM GABRIELLA CÁZARES-KELLY

Last summer for Bloom Night, I hosted our first Instagram Live video, during which I spoke a land acknowledgement recognizing that Tohono Chul is on unceded lands of the Tohono O'odham and Yoeme tribes. The next day, I received a youtube video link from Gabriella Cázares-Kelly, Pima County Recorder and the first Native American elected to Pima countywide office, where she shared the correct pronunciation of her tribe, Tohono O'odham. Gabriella is asked for the pronunciation of her tribe so frequently that she has it printed on the back of her business cards.

Grateful for her instruction and curious about her leadership path, we met for coffee last fall. She has an infectious passion for democracy, teaching people about her tribe, and I also learned that she was married at Tohono Chul! I asked (more like pleaded) Gabriella to please write for our Journal on any topic of choice. Here are her words, uninterpreted and uninterrupted.

When I first started engaging in community organizing in Tucson, I was surprised by how often I was told "I've never met a Native American," usually followed by a barrage of questions: "What tribe are you from?" "Is it disrespectful to say 'tribe'?" "Do you live on the reservation?" "Is the word 'reservation' offensive?"

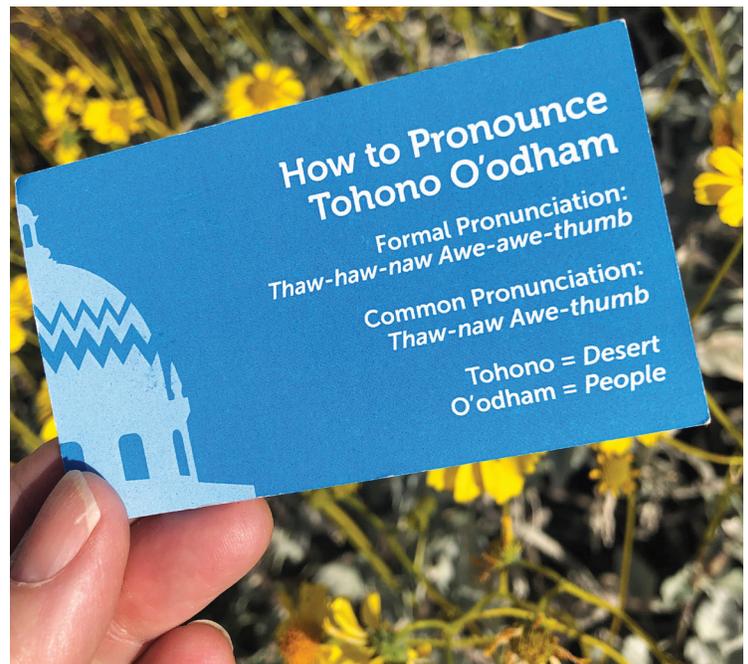

I, myself, usually only have one question in return: What do you mean you've never met a Native American? We're everywhere! This is Arizona!

I'm from the Tohono O'odham Nation. We have the second largest reservation in the country. It's nearly the size of Connecticut, but most people have no idea we are here. If you have visited Tohono Chul's lovely grounds, you have been on our traditional lands. In fact, you have spoken our language: the names Tohono Chul, Tucson, and even Arizona come from the Tohono O'odham language!

Arizona is home to 22 distinct tribal nations. More than 25% of Arizona is tribal land. There are 574 federally recognized tribes across the United States. At one time in our history, we would not have been allowed to leave our own reservations without permission, but those days are gone. You can now find Native Americans all over the country and all over the world.

Sometimes people are so excited to meet me, a visibly Native American person, that they often expect me to teach them about the history of my tribe, other tribes, languages, cultures, belief systems, or traditional plants. Suddenly, my mere presence transforms the world around me into a makeshift "Native Americans 101" classroom and the questions keep coming and coming. This has happened to me while grocery shopping, flying on a plane, riding the elevator, and just standing on the sidewalk.

In these short interactions with people unfamiliar with my community, I can see them struggling with everything they thought they knew about Native Americans. First, of course, is the realization that we still exist! Next, is usually the fact that we're a part of the modern world. Then of course, that we have interests outside of simply existing as a Native American. Sometimes people are so challenged by these ideas that I have to tell them, "I'm a 21st Century Native. I live in a house in Northwest Tucson. I'm a voting nerd. I like Star Trek. I'm on Twitter."

So how do you learn more about our community? Like you would with anything you are interested in, I first recommend doing some research. Google “Whose lands are you on?” to find the names of your local tribes. If you’re visiting another state, find out the name of the local tribes before you go. See if there are museums or cultural centers you can visit. Another really helpful thing to do is follow Native American content creators on social media. We are diverse and have different perspectives. We aren’t just historians; we’re also artists, scientists, and politicians. We have many things to say and we’re already saying them—it’s just up to you to listen.

Lastly, I encourage you to share spaces with us in person. Visit our businesses, go to our events. Sometimes people worry about whether they are allowed to go to Native American events. If it is closed to the general public, it will say that on the flyer. Otherwise, you’re good to go—you just have to remember that you’re a guest. Guest rules apply, like they do anywhere else.

Just like learning about the beautiful Sonoran Desert, you aren’t going to learn everything about the Native American community all at once. You first read articles, books, and websites, and learn the differences between hummingbirds, quails and roadrunners. You learn about the different species of plants and the varieties of cacti. You learn the seasons of the desert; the changes in temperature and the heaviness of the clouds. You don’t learn everything about the Sonoran Desert by interrogating the hummingbirds or by dissecting an ocotillo.

Instead, you sit with patience. You listen, you watch, you wait. You come back, again and again.

Recorder Gabriella Cázares-Kelly was elected to serve her 4-year term in 2020. Her office is responsible for Voter Registration, Early Voting and Document Recording. She is the first Native American to hold an elected county-wide office in Pima County. She is a former educator and community organizer. She has written pieces in Colorlines, The Huffington Post and the UCLA Law Review. @GabriellaCKelly

General Public | Regular Admission

As the spring sun begins to warm the Sonoran Desert, Tohono Chul invites you to join us in celebrating Arbor Day on Saturday, April 29th, from 10am to 1pm.

Our State of the Garden address will provide an exciting opportunity to hear from our Executive Director about the future plans for Tohono Chul and how we aim to beautify, diversify, and address the climate concerns facing the region.

A variety of tables will be set up, featuring information about our activities and programs, as well as displays from our local partners and vendors. Attendees can also enjoy live music in the performance garden, delicious food & drinks from our bistro, and much more.

SCHEDULE:

9am: New Member's Tour

10am: Event starts

11am: State of the Garden Address

11:30am to 1pm: Live music in the Performance Garden

1:00pm: Event finishes

EXHIBITIONS 2023

Barbara Rogers | Shrines to Botanical Relics #22 | oil on panel with saguaro cross section and glass

Kate Breakey | Tumbleweed, Sandario Road | archival pigment print with hand-colored oils + pencil

Gavin Hugh Troy | Formless Into Form | pencil and acrylic on canvas

C.J. Shane | Desert Rain | mixed media on canvas

Keith Marroquin | The Effect of Wind on Sand | archival pigment print

KATE BREAKEY AND BARBARA ROGERS PRESCIENCE REMAINS

Main Gallery | through May 10, 2023

Prescience Remains communicates the strength of character and vision Tucson artists and icons Kate Breakey and Barbara Rogers bring to this world. Both artists have created bodies of work that recognize and exalt the castaway, celebrating the ineffable wonder and beauty they draw from nature while confidently looking forward, steadfast in the belief that beauty is found everywhere, moves in many directions, and possesses many meanings, to the benefit of us all.

FEATURED ARTIST: GAVIN HUGH TROY

Welcome Gallery | through May 10, 2023

One of downtown Tucson's longest-running artists, Gavin Hugh Troy has been a fixture since he moved here in 1998. Prolific – Troy allows every experience to filter into his creative process. Resourceful with materials and moving through diverse subject matter, Troy's work is fueled by his endless imagination and possesses a lyrical brilliance that takes the viewer to another place.

10 X 10 | A FUNDRAISER

Entry Gallery | through May 28, 2023

An invitational exhibition and fundraiser that presents, on a small scale, the many artists who make Tohono Chul such a unique experience. 10 x 10 features a wide range of sculpture and paintings, photographs and mixed media works no larger than 10 inches in any dimension - all priced at $100.

THE EXOTIC SUBLIME

Main Gallery | May 18 - August 8, 2023

Reception with the Artists: May 18, 5:30 to 8:00pm

The romantic Sonoran landscape is examined - from arm's length, from distant vistas, from out of this world - telling vivid and cautionary tales of what this place used to be with what will become of this place. The voice in between, the creative resolve, forms a current into the odd and wondrous grandeur of The Exotic Sublime.

QUEEN OF THE NIGHT

Entry Gallery | June 2 - July 30, 2023

Bloom Night is coming! To celebrate the beloved Peniocereus greggii or night-blooming cereus, Queen of the Night unveils magical and mysterious pieces from Tohono Chul's Permanent Collection as well as and our creative community of artists. All Hail the Queen!

Visitors enjoy pointing out the early spring arrivals like the cheery Mexican Gold Poppies, which are wildflowers native to arid areas of the Southwest, and great at attracting pollinators.

CORPORATE MEMBER SPOTLIGHT:

DISCOVERING TOHONO CHUL: A JOURNEY THROUGH BEAUTY, HISTORY, AND CONSERVATION

Nestled in the heart of Sonora, Mexico lies the small colonial town of Alamos. Known for its vibrant flora, cobblestone streets, and colonial architecture, Alamos is a designated "Magical Town" in Mexico, recognized for its natural beauty, historical relevance, cuisine, and hospitality.

I had the opportunity to visit Alamos for a wedding and was immediately enchanted by its charm. It was there that my love for nature and gardening was sparked, specifically because of Adeniums, the stunning desert flowers that bloom in a variety of colors.

Years later, I was introduced to Tohono Chul, a botanical garden dedicated to the preservation of the Sonoran Desert and its unique ecosystem. The Old Pueblo Group at Morgan Stanley has a number of clients who have supported Tohono Chul in the past, either financially or through their time, and it was no surprise that I was immediately drawn to their mission and vision.

When you visit Tohono Chul, you're able to immerse yourself in the beauty of the Sonoran Desert and learn about the importance of conservation. We admire the staff's dedication to making a positive impact on our community, something we also aspire to do as financial advisors. Our passion for education and empowering individuals to make informed decisions about their wealth is a cornerstone of our practice.

That's why our team is thrilled to partner with Tohono Chul and make a lasting impact on our community.

At the Old Pueblo Group at Morgan Stanley, we aim to be a source of education and support for our clients. If you have any questions or would like a second opinion about your finances, please do not hesitate to reach out to our office.

WHERE THE WILD THINGS ARE TOHONO CHUL'S WILDLIFE CAMERA CREW

When most people think of Tohono Chul, they probably remember the bountiful prickly pear or the sprawling saguaros. While Tohono Chul has established itself as a beautiful botanical garden, it is also a desert preserve and haven for many different animal species.

The Tohono Chul Wildlife Camera Crew, consisting of a small group of docents and volunteers, is an entirely volunteer-led project that monitors wildlife cameras around the garden. There are six wildlife cameras around our 49-acres, most of them placed to catch wildlife activity in the arroyos of the natural desert areas. There are also two positioned off the trail in the central garden around the water sources like the Riparian Area.

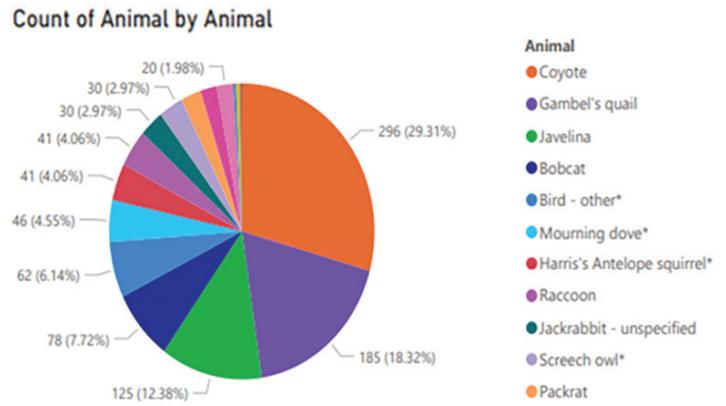

The camera captured this couple of coyotes getting to know each other during mating season.

Twice a month the Wildlife Camera Crew gathers and replaces the SD cards from each camera, changes batteries when needed, and meet to go through each photo on the camera's SD card. The crew goes through all the photos and documents any animal detected that they are tracking, including the location, date, and time. Due to their abundance, quail, rabbits, and doves are not tracked in Tohono Chul's project, but if there is a good picture of one of these species the group keeps it.

The wildlife cameras are motion-activated and take pictures day and night. Not only do animals trigger the motion sensor, but so do branches on a windy day or a guest visiting the garden. Sometimes an SD card can have as many as 2,000 images!

Out of all the species that Tohono Chul is tracking, coyotes are the mostly commonly detected on the cameras, with javelinas and bobcats being seen on all six cameras as well. While only one skunk has ever been recorded on camera, raccoons have been spotted near the water sources on several occasions.

When asked why this project is so important, Tohono Chul docent Gerri Conn said, “there are two reasons: to track the fauna of Tohono Chul as a desert preserve, to see their health, population, and occurrence over time, but to also help with the larger study by the Sky Island Alliance that has the same goals”. Carolyn Thomas, another Tohono Chul docent, sends pictures and information gathered by the wildlife camera crew to the Sky Island Alliance for their Fotofauna project.

The Sky Island Fotofauna Project is a community science project across the Sky Island region that involves volunteers submitting a checklist of what species they detect on their wildlife camera. This project is tracking 44 different species, including mammals, birds, and reptiles, and their presence or absence in the area over time. The results of this project help to show the effects of urban development and seasonal changes on these species, as well as helping to monitor their range limitations.

For more information on their project, please visit skyislandalliance.org.

UPCOMING FREE ADMISSION DAYS:

NATIONAL PUBLIC GARDENS DAY

Friday | May 12 | Free Admission

Help promote awareness of the beauty of the desert by bringing family or a new friend! This is a great way to help others learn and appreciate the value of our home.

GOT MILKWEED? YOU CAN BE A WAYSTATION!

Each fall, hundreds of millions of monarch butterflies migrate from the United States and Canada to mountains in central Mexico where they wait out the winter until conditions favor a return flight in the spring. The monarch migration is truly one of the world's greatest natural wonders yet it is threatened by habitat loss. But, you can easily play an important role in helping to keep monarchs alive and well by planting milkweed seeds and creating your own monarch waystation! No seeds? No problem.

Make a minimum $75 donation to Tohono Chul to receive your special seed packet! Your packet will include Milkweed and other host plant seeds, a "Got Milkweed" yard sign, a bumper sticker, and an information pamphlet on how to plant your seeds. Want to know all the details? Please visit the GotMilkweed page on our website to get your packet! <https://tohonochul.org/got-milkweed>

CHILDREN'S MUSEUM ORO VALLEY OPENS AT TOHONO CHUL BECOME A MEMBER!

The Children's Museum Oro Valley (CMOV) opened at Tohono Chul on January 3, 2023. Children's Museum Oro Valley at Tohono Chul (CMOV@TC) is a groundbreaking collaboration which is giving visitors the best of two of Tucson's iconic attractions at one destination. Just 3 months in, and we have already seen thousands of folks visit the new CMOV@TC location, introducing a whole new generation to the wonders and uniqueness of our Sonoran Desert.

The experience of CMOV has been transformed with the relocation, with indoor and outdoor nature-based exhibits, activities that change daily and with the seasons, and educational programming for kids and families. Embedded within the gardens, CMOV@TC offers families a complete garden experience. You will be able to use your Children's Museum membership to access the Children's Museum Oro Valley at Tohono Chul through June 2023. After that, we hope you will become a Tohono Chul member and continue to have access to the gardens and the Children's Museum at Tohono Chul all year long. Family Memberships allow 2 adults and all children or grandchildren (17 and under) in their household to attend, any time throughout the year, FREE

"Tohono Chul has a huge role in closing the nature-deficit gap by letting kids be wild explorers of our gardens," said Tohono Chul Executive Director Jamie Maslyn Larson. "I am thrilled that CMOV's incredible programs and educators accelerates our goal to proactively welcome families here to experience the wonder of the Sonoran Desert. We can hardly wait to see the next generation of nature-lovers grow up at Tohono Chul!"

CMOV is open Tuesday - Sunday from 9:00am-1:00pm with access to all outdoor exhibits available during regular Tohono Chul hours.

More: tohono-chul.org/cmova-at-tohono-chul

Children can engage in a number of gardening explorations such as planting and watering.

There are plenty of opportunities for quality up-close time observation time with desert plants.

Traveling through the gardens along the paths is part of the fun of going to the Children's Museum.
